Death Of Mrs. T. E. Moore, Jr.

Mrs. "Tommie" Thomas Moore, wife of County Attorney T. E. Moore, Jr., died at her country home, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Marsh, in East Paris, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. Mrs. Moore had been ill several days from an attack of blood poisoning. She was apparently on the road to recovery when peritonitis, complicated with other troubles, set in, and death followed shortly.

Mrs. Moore was the youngest daughter of the late Capt. and Mrs. James M. Thomas and was known to everybody as "Baby Tom" from her earliest years until she reached womanhood.

She was a young woman of excellent qualities, a steadfast friend, hospitable and generous to a fault and possessed a wide circle of friends and acquaintances who admired her for her lovely graces of mind and heart. She was married several years ago to Thomas E. Moore, Jr., now County Attorney, who, with three children, Wm. Estill, Rogers and Marian, survive.

The funeral services will take place at the residence of her sister, Mrs. John Ireland, the old Thomas home, on South Main street, this (Tuesday) afternoon, at three o'clock, with services by Eld. Carey E. Morgan. The pall-bearers will be: Frank Walker, Claude M. Thomas, James M. O'Brien, Dr. Wm. Kenney, Rudolph Davis, Harry Marsh.

Mr. Moore has the sympathy of the entire community in his bereavement.

Yerkes Resigns.

John W. Yerkes, of Kentucky, Saturday resigned as Commissioner of Internal Revenue, which place he has held for several years. He will enter the practice of law in Washington, having become associated with an important firm in that city. Mr. Yerkes resigned partly on account of his health, but also largely on account of the fact that his recommendation in the distribution of offices in Kentucky has not been as highly regarded as his position would justify. His successor has been named by Secretary Cortelyou, but has not been announced.

Weather Conditions.

The unseasonable weather prevailing throughout this section the past few days has been productive of a great deal of gripe, rheumatism, pneumonia and other kindred complaints. The cold spell has worked havoc with gardens and young fruit, while the crops of young wheat, clover, oats, etc., are believed to have been seriously damaged. Taken all in all, the weather clerk has surely been in an ugly mood since the closing days of March.

There is no Refrigerator better than the Gurney. Come in and see to compare our prices with other first-class makes and see how much less we sell them.

Who! What! When! Which! Why! Where!

The culinary library has just been increased by a volume called "One Thousand Simple Soups." When we shall have learned "who is who" and "why is the whereof of the whichness of what" we may be able to decide on which one of the thousand we, then, it, or is, are.

PERTINENT PICKINGS.

An old lady of this county, who knew very little of the workings of modern railroad train, recently made a trip to Louisville.

In the vicinity of Frankfort, a skunk was run over by the train and his remains were scattered along the track for some distance. The train had not run over half a mile from the scene before one of the axles developed a hot box and the train was of course stopped. The fumes of the burning oil and packing mingled with the aroma of the cat, and the old lady wanted to know what delayed the train. When a man told her it was a hot box she put her handkerchief to her nose and said it was the first time in her life she ever knew that a hot box smelled like that.

A fashion writer displays his density of his ignorance by stating that "the kimono will be worn, as usual, in the boudoir." The kimono is an alluring Japanese garment which is worn by a woman when she knows she will be surprised on the front porch by a man who has never had an opportunity to see how fetching she can be in negligee.

A former Mayor of Baltimore, who closed with his trained nurse three months ago, has returned to his wife. That lady is now in a position to give his practical demonstration that all hell is not divided into politics.

The mathematical genius who has pointed out that, by abstaining from stogies during the term of your natural life, you may own a suburban cottage should show how many suspension bridges you could build if you employed the time you waste waiting for a shave in a barber shop.

A Pennsylvania judge ordered a woman who wore elbow sleeves into his court, to put on her coat and thus plainly infringed upon the inalienable right of every woman to bare arms.

A well known woman writer boasts that she has sprung nearly 12,000 cooking recipes on the public since she began appearing in the newspapers. We will now all arise and sing, "Amazing grace! And are we yet alive?" after a short session of wondering how many of them have been tried upon us.

A conductor on a Paris and Lexington interurban car had such a good run of business Sunday afternoon that he had difficulty in keeping himself supplied with small change. Many persons who patronized his car handed him dollars and bills of larger denominations in payment of their fares.

The conductor, however, managed to get along fairly well until a woman, carrying a tiny infant, boarded his car. When he approached the woman for her fare she handed him a $5 bill.

"Is that the smallest you have, madam?" queried the conductor, fearing another stringency in change.

The woman looked at the conductor and then at her baby, and replied:

"Yes, I have been married only twelve months."

Here is a good fellowship story that is going the rounds: Give a man a ten-cent cigar and he will beam all over and love you for six hours; offer him the 10 cents with which to buy it for himself and he will throw it in your face. Give a man a pass to a show and he will call you a good fellow in all the languages at his disposal; offer him the money to buy a ticket, and he will call you a fool. Ask a man to your home to take "pot luck" and he will jump at the chance; give him $2 and tell him to get a good meal at a cafe with your compliments, and he will knock you down. The dollar is mighty, but it isn't warm.

A Carlisle man asserts that he recently saw a rat with horns. As the authorities insist that local option law is being enforced in Carlisle, there must be something radically wrong with the soda water in that city.

"Speaking of strong union labor sentiment, my wife was telling me she encountered the real thing a few days ago," said a prominent railroad man. "We have been having a negro to do chores about the house at odd times and my wife concluded to give him one of my discarded hats, which was one of the recognized high-class makes and as good as new."

"After the negro had finished his work and received his pay he was told to wait a moment and my wife went in the house and returned with the hat. His eyes bulged out with delight when he was told that it was a present for him. After he had looked it over and turned the sweat band back a look of disgust overcame him and he handed the top piece back to my wife."

"What is the matter with the hat, inquired my wife. 'Don't you want it?' 'Missus, I likes de hat but it is a 'seab' hat and again my principles to wear it,' replied the negro, and nothing could induce him to take it."

A Louisville church is going to have impressive services celebrating the "second anniversary of the installation of a pipe organ." This is the limit in the celebrating line, and it now remains for some enterprising congregation to celebrate the installation of a "busted" water pipe or the pipe of a ton of coal.

A Paris man whose wife was quite fat was caught flirting, and made a rather novel explanation of his conduct. "The great ambition of your life," he said to his wife after being caught, "was to become slender. Knowing there was no efficacy in the stuff known as Anti-Fat, I resolved to flit away your superfluous flesh. It wrung my heart to do it, but I was willing to make any sacrifice for your happiness. So I flirted, and you began to lose flesh. You are now as spirituelle as you ever wished to be. Come to my arms, and say you never doubted me."

The only way to stop people from fastening a stamp at any old place upon the envelope, except the right one, is to do as is done in England. There a letter which does not have the stamp in the right position is cast aside and handled only when all other mail is sorted and exchanged. This idea was advanced by a clerk in the Paris postoffice. "We often lose considerable time because of these letters," continued the clerk, "for often we have to stop and turn over an envelope to find the stamp. The worst offenders in this respect are not foreigners, but those who have lived here for years."

Feudist Case Transferred.

The case of Tom Cockrell, the oldest surviving member of the Cockrell faction of the Cockrell-Hargis feud, charged with flourishing a revolver on a passenger train was transferred from the Lexington police court to Paris. The offense is alleged to have been committed on an L. & N. passenger train between Paris and Winchester. Cockrell was presented in Justice J. P. Howell's court yesterday morning, and waived examining trial. He gave bond in $300 to appear at the June term of court.

An Important Event.

An event out of the ordinary will be the engagement here of Jeanne Marno, America's greatest reader, under the auspices of the A. J. Lovely Company, performed Rank Knights of Pythias, at the Grand Opera House on the evening of Friday, April 19. The local knights intend to make this a gala night and have started to boom their attraction. Miss Marno will give her adaptation "The Lion and the Mouse," that stirring play of the hour, in which that master dramatist, Charles Klein, has gripped a vital problem of the day. Here is what one noted critic says of Miss Marno's art: "The dramatic reading of Israel Zangwill's 'Merely Mary Ann,' by the gifted artist, Miss Marno, was, to my mind, something unique and charming as to itself, and highly suggestive from an artistic point of view. Miss Marno gave the story with admirable talent in all ways. Her tone carried, her enunciation was pure and round as a pearl, her voice color was suited to the characters portrayed, and, taken for all in all, I found it entertaining in a high degree. There is a wide suggestiveness in this way of dealing with dramatic literature. If novels are to be dramatized, why should not the process be revised and our dramas given us abridged and in story form? Miss Marno is abundantly endowed with that highest of all desiderata for a public entertainer, magnetism, and whatever the emotion to be conveyed, she carries it to her listener's inmost heart as along currents of electric power. Her talents are growing year by year, and there is no reason why she should not attain national fame."—J. S. Van Cleave, in the Cincinnati Times-Star.

Lovers of music will also be accorded a treat in the appearance of Miss Westfield, pianist, who has been a member of the faculty of the Cincinnati College of Music. These two ladies give an entertainment that appeals instantly to audiences of culture and refinement.

Miss Marno is socially known to many Paris people as Miss Mannheim and they will be out in number to welcome her.

Suspected Murderer Arrested Here.

Ed. Turner, alias Doc Starret, an alleged fugitive from justice was arrested at the L. & N. Station Saturday afternoon by Officer Ben Bishop and placed in the Paris jail for safe-keeping. Officer Bishop received a telegram from Detective J. S. Henry, of Chattanooga, Tenn., who was at Winchester, asking that a man on the train answering Turner's description be placed under arrest.

Starret is accused of the brutal murder of his wife, Lillie Turner, on April 2, her body being found on Lookout Mountain with her throat cut from ear to ear.

Starret claimed to be in the employ of a lumber firm at Farmers, Ky., and was on his way to Iowa to visit his parents.

Turner was apprehended at Winchester by Detective Henry. While waiting for a train the prisoner eluded Henry and came to Paris.

Turner stoutly asserts his innocence and claims that the wrong man has been placed under arrest.

Henry came to Paris and fully identified his man. He returned to Winchester for the purpose of looking up Turner's record and to secure a photograph and other evidence.

At the jail Turner refused to make a statement of any kind regarding his case beyond the assertion that he was not the man wanted.

The police authorities here have refused to surrender Turner until positive evidence as to his identity is produced.

Well Intended.

"Goodby, Jessie!"
"Goodby, Annie May. I hope I'll be a great big girl before you come to make us another visit." — Woman's Home Companion.

Dog That Climbed a Tree.

Can a dog climb a tree? A correspondent writes: "While on a walk on snowshoes in New Hampshire, we tracked a porcupine to a balsam fir, in which it had taken refuge. My Scottish terrier climbed the tree, pulling herself up from branch to branch to a height of about seven feet, where a space of bare trunk separated her from the porcupine, which had watched her progress with evident alarm. The terrier made several ineffectual attempts to scale the smooth bark and finally jumped down into the snow." And of another curious trait the same writer continues: "This little dog and her mate, now dead, though enthusiastic fire worshippers at home, never sat near the bonfires built at luncheon or tea time on winter walks, but dug holes in the snow at a little distance, in which they curled themselves up after the manner of their primitive ancestors."—Chicago News.

Processes Which Defy Analysis.

I think that the more thoroughly and conscientiously we endeavor to study biological problems the more we are convinced that even those processes which we have already regarded as explicable both by chemical and physical laws are in reality infinitely more complex and at present defy any attempts at a mechanical explanation. Thus we have been satisfied to account for the absorption of food from the alimentary canal by the laws of diffusion and osmosis. But we now know that, as regards osmosis, the wall of the intestine does not behave like a dead membrane. We know that the intestinal wall is covered with epithelium and that every epithelial cell is in itself an organism, a living being with the most complex functions. We know that it takes up food by the active contractions of its protoplasm in the same way as observed in independent naked animal cells.—A. Bunge.

Her Valentine.

A young woman wrote about the year 1750: "The night before St. Valentine's day I got five bay leaves and pinned four of them to the four corners of my pillow and the fifth to the middle. And then if I dreamed of my sweetheart Betty said we would be married before the year was out. But to make more sure I boiled an egg hard and took out the yolk and filled it with salt and when I went to bed ate it, shell and all, without speaking or drinking after it. We also wrote our lovers' names upon bits of paper and rolled them up in clay and put them into water, and the first that rose up was to be our valentine. Mr. Blossom was my man, I lay abed and shut my eyes all the morning till he came to our house, for I would not have seen another man before him for all the world!"

To each County Chairman: At a meeting of the Executive Committee held in Lexington, Ky., on Thursday, April 4th, 1907, the following being present: C. S. Williams, S. T. Prewitt, R. B. Thomas, J. R. Bassom, G. W. McMillen, and C. LeBus, it was unanimously agreed that a full Board meeting be called to meet in Lexington, Wednesday, April 24th, at 9 a. m., at the Phoenix Hotel, being the day before the barbecue, so that we will get through in time to attend the Barbecue.

You must work every day and insist that each precinct chairman put in every possible minute toward securing the 1907 pledges; and, if you have a precinct chairman who is not pulling as he should, get someone else to canvass his precinct, and report it accordingly to the full Board meeting.

Be sure and call in all your pledges and have them copied in book form, and bring all these pledges and book to Lexington April 24th next.

By that time we must know how much 1907 tobacco is signed and who or what county will make the worst showing. Work with pride; work hard; work now; work tomorrow; work until April 24th, and make the best showing.

As Others See Us.

The Washington Post says: "A curious lawsuit has been concluded in Bourbon county, Ky., and the plaintiff has been awarded $10,000 in damages because the Republican County Committee read him out of the party. He sued for $25,000, and thus paid his party a high compliment. The St. Louis Globe-Democrat says: 'It is very significant that a jury, undoubtedly composed mainly of Democrats in a county called Bourbon, should estimate that a man read out of the Republican party is entitled to as heavy damages as this jury awarded.' Strictly speaking, there can be no such thing as reading a man out of the party. Any voting citizen is always free to cast his ballot for the candidates of any party. It is his right, also, to believe in the policies of either of the various parties and to search for any party's alleged principles. There are, however, party organs that undertake to determine whether or not conspicuous members of their party are orthodox in faith. Now and then a bumptious committee-man essays this role. It will, perhaps be recalled that a standpat daily in New York read out President McKinley and Secretary Root, appending to each of them the tag 'Free Trader,' because the strove to secure fair treatment for the Porto Ricans. For a long time after the demand for tariff revision began to be heard on the Republican side of the fence every prominent National Republican was tagged, and the ridiculous practice still obtains to a limited extent. For example, Gov. Guild of Massachusetts, is pictured as a black sheep wearing the 'free-trader' brand. No Republican can be a free trader, and very many Democrats are protectionists."

The Hospital Site.

The matter of selecting a site for the proposed hospital in Paris, which was debated at a meeting of the Hospital League, Saturday, was again undecided. A committee of business men composed of J. W. Lexington's Big Meeting.

Everything is shaping up nicely for the spring meeting which will be held at the Kentucky Association course, Lexington, from Saturday, April 27, to Saturday, May 4, both days inclusive. The programme book, which is now on the press, calls for the distribution of $2,400 daily for the six races. Every inducement will be offered for the best horses quartered at the track to sport silks, and from the number of applications for stable room, it is believed that more horses will be there than can be accommodated. There are already quartered at the track close to four hundred horses, and the majority of them are in splendid condition.

Tarry Succeeds Brother.

The Winchester City Council has elected Mal B. Tarry, Chief of Police to succeed the late John C. Tarry, and ex-Jailer James H. Boone was elected to the vacancy on the police force made by Mal B. Tarry's promotion.

Cattle Breeders To Organize.

A very important meeting of the beef cattle breeders of Kentucky has been called for today at Lexington to organize a State Association of Beef Cattle Breeders and for the discussion of vital matters concerning the beef cattle interests of the State. The objects of the Association will be to promote the interests of beef cattle in all its respective branches and to encourage by educational means and other influences the use of pure-bred beef bulls by the general farmer.

Some years ago Kentucky held the premier position as a beef cattle breeding State, and it was the common practice among the leading breeders in the United States to come to Kentucky to secure fine animals to head their herds, but of late because of some lack of interest and the consequent use of scrub and half-bred bulls the stock has degenerated and the State has lost much of its former prestige. Today farmers are producing a large number of common steers, and, finding the business unprofitable, are losing interest in the business and by degrees disposing of their cattle.

A New York judge is said to read his own poetry to prisoners at the bar. If it were at any other bar, it would doubtless drive his listeners to drink.

A New York man trying to prove his sanity conducted his own case in court, and the judge came to the conclusion that he had a fool for a client.

Some men seem to think they are doing a great deal toward righting the world's wrongs by fussing with their neighbors.

For Rent.

By Constance D'Arcy Mackay.

Copyright, 1907, by T. C. Parcells.

"Be sure it has six light rooms, all outside," abjured Grace.

"And remember it must be in a nice neighborhood," added Molly.

Rowena sighed. "I'll try," she said resignedly and, tucking her umbrella under her arm, started down the stairs. It was a cool day, with a gray sky and a promise of rain in the air. The streets and boulevards had the faded, dusty look that late summer always wears before the first frost arrives to sharpen and brighten things. Vans laden with furniture passed with a frequency which proclaimed that moving time had come.

"I must remember that all places look less cheerful on a dull day," said Rowena to herself, taking a list out of her pocketbook and running over it with a ruminating eye.

"Bright, attractive apartment, six rooms and bath. I think I'll try that one, though they all advertise them as attractive, and the reality is a lot of stuffy little rooms overlooking an air shaft on one side and somebody's back yard on the other. But I'm starting awfully early in the season, and that ought to give me a better choice."

For a week Rowena had been flat hunting, climbing endless flights of stairs and interviewing a seemingly endless line of real estate agents and janitors. Each morning she set out lightly, and each evening she came back fatigued and disheartened. "The price we want to pay and the kind of an apartment we would like don't seem to fit together," she wailed, recounting her adventures to Molly and Grace at nightfall. And this particular day proved no exception to the rule. By 11 o'clock in the morning she had tramped miles and found nothing suitable.

"Is this the Edgemere?" she wearily inquired of an elevator boy in an apartment building whose marble entrance and artistic green walls were like a ray of hope to her dejected spirits.

"Yes," said he of the trim suit and brass buttons.

"I'd like to look at one on the third floor," said Rowena, smiling on him. Rowena's smile was one of her chief charms. It lighted up her plump face and showed a dimple lurking in her cheek. It would captivate any one from a king to an elevator boy.

The third floor of the Edgemere proved desirable from every point of view. Rowena was delighted. "And all for $50 a month," she breathed.

The boy gaped at her. "Fifty dollars?" he scoffed. "Why, these here apartments rent for a hundred and fifty."

"One hundred and fifty! You're certainly mistaken. The paper said—"

She opened her pocketbook, found the clipping and showed it to him. He shook his head.

"Misprint, lady," he answered. "They ain't no such price."

"Sure, that's just what I've been telling this gentleman," said a neat looking scrubwoman, suddenly appearing in the doorway. Behind her towered a fair haired young fellow, broad of shoulder and firm of chin. He stared at Rowena for an instant.

"Why, Miss Holden," he cried, with a boyish laugh of pleasure, "are you on the trail too?"

"I should think you'd know it at first glance," said Rowena tragically. "My sisters tell me that my face has taken on the expression of the New York flat hunter—a look of grim despair that is unmistakable."

Dwight Curtis laughed again. "I wonder if your trials are as great as mine. I'm chubbing together with two other fellows, and trying to fill the wants of each and all is turning me gray. Moreover, I feel I'm getting the rickets from sprouting up so many flights of stairs."

"The building we're in now is going to be torn down, so we have to move. And it's my turn to search," explained Rowena. "And, oh, Mr. Curtis, have you seen any reasonable apartments with light, airy rooms in a pleasant neighborhood not too far from the car line?"

"I have not," Dwight answered gravely, "though I repeat those phrases even in my sleep. I tell you what—why can't we hunt together? It will be a lot more sociable, and two heads are better than one, you know. Besides, down at the beach this summer that Hawkins man monopolized so much of your time that it's only fair for me to have my innings now. Shall we go to Seventy-sixth street next?"

"Do you realize," said Rowena a week later as they sat on a bench on Riverside drive, "that time is flying and we've found nothing—absolutely nothing—so far?"

"But we've had a lot of fun," Dwight replied, smiling reminiscently as he thought of sundry strolls they had taken in the park, sundry luncheons tete-a-tete in the little casino, sundry rides to perfectly irrelevant places, and all with the ostensible excuse of flat hunting.

"This is good enough for me," he went on, with a look first at Rowena and then at the river, where myriads of water craft piled up and down. Steam launches puffed portentously, sailboats gleamed in the sunlight, and an excursion steamer churned past, all flag flying and a band playing lustily on deck. The rows of stone houses facing the drive were closed and silent, the lower windows boarded up, while the half shut blinds of the upper ones gave them a semblance of supercilious drooping eyelids.

Rowena toyed with her parasol. She was looking dangerously demure in pale blue. A tip tilted, coquettish hat sat lightly on her well poised head.

"I feel like a perfect outcast when I return at night," she confessed. "The girls fuss over me and say what a hard day I must have been through."

"I know," echoed Dwight, grinning sympathetically. "The fellows tell me that I'm a brick and that they're no end grateful, while as it is I'm having the time of my life! Must we really go?" he pleaded as Rowena abruptly gathered up her gloves and parasol.

"I simply must decide on something today," she said, a ring of determination in her voice. "I cannot put it off any longer."

"Let's try this, then," suggested Dwight, looking up at a white stone building on a side street. "This is 29. It looks pretty spick and span, doesn't it? I have an idea that it will do."

Rowena gave a regretful shake of the head.

"It's too small," she declared, glancing about at the little drawing room. "But, oh, what a darling! It's the loveliest one we've seen anywhere! With a little money and a little taste it could be made a perfect jewel box. How the sun streams in, and how dear and cozy this drawing room would be!"

"With a window seat there," said Dwight, "and a bookcase against the wall."

"And some pictures and bits of bric-a-brac on the mantel!" Rowena glowed with enthusiasm.

"And a low round table and a reading lamp," added Dwight delightedly.

The voice of the ever present landlady broke in on them. "I think you'd like it," she observed. "It's just the place for young married couples."

Rowena gasped and retreated. Dwight followed.

"Dear," he besought, "you know it's exactly as she says—it's meant for us and no one else. Ah, Rowena, won't you say that the light which shines through these windows will be our home light? Won't you say that every night at dinner time the woman I love will be waiting here to welcome me? Won't you say—and there was mirth in his voice as well as tenderness—"won't you say that our flat hunting is over?"

Rowena hesitated.

"I don't know," she began demurely. "I hadn't meant to lease my heart so soon, but since—since so desirable a tenant has applied it seems only right to oblige him with a permanent occupancy, provided he keeps it in good repair."

Pullman's Giant Passenger.

There was one story of his career that Mr. Pullman used to tell with manifest delight. One night, going out of Chicago, a long, lean, ugly man, with a wart on his cheek, came into the depot. He paid George M. Pullman 50 cents, and half a berth was assigned him. Then he kicked off his boots, which were of surprising length, turned into the berth and, having an easy conscience, was sleeping like a healthy baby before the car left the depot. Along came another passenger and paid his 50 cents. In two minutes he was back at George Pullman.

"There's a man in that berth of mine," said he hotly, "and he's about ten feet high. How am I going to sleep there, I'd like to know? Go and look at him."

In went Pullman—mad too. The tall, lank man's knees were under his chin, his arms were stretched across the bed, and his feet were stored comfortably—for him. Pullman shook him until he awoke and then told him if he wanted the whole berth he would have to pay $1.

"My dear sir," said the tall man, "a contract is a contract. I have paid you 50 cents for half this berth, and, as you see, I am occupying it. There's the other half," pointing to a strip about six-inches wide. "Set that and don't disturb me again." And so saying, the man with the wart on his face went to sleep again. He was Abraham Lincoln.

Yellowstone Park.

The Yellowstone National park covers an area of 3,348 square miles of territory and embraces within its boundaries specimens of almost every kind of natural scenery—waterfalls, rapids, lakes, mountains, boiling springs, mud volcanoes, geysers, canyons, caves, basaltic terraces and giant boulders worn by erosion into every manner and kind of queer and fantastic shape that the imagination can conceive of. The Yellowstone is at present by far and away the largest park in the world.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse because of the uncertainty as to their harmless character, but is a medicine of known composition, a full list of all its ingredients being printed in plain English on every bottle wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its makeup. There is in fact the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold through druggists, that does not contain alcohol and that too in large quantities. Furthermore, it is the only medicine for woman's special diseases, the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of some of these endorsements will be sent to any address, post-paid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card or letter, of Dr. J. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Don't forget that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for woman's weaknesses and delicate ailments, is not a patent or secret medicine, being the "Favorite Prescription" of a regularly educated and graduated physician, engaged in the practice of his chosen specialty—that of diseases of women—that its ingredients are printed in plain English on every bottle wrapper; that it is the only medicine especially designed for the cure of woman's diseases that contains no alcohol, and the only one that has a professional endorsement worth more than all the so-called "testimonials" ever published for other medicines. Send for these endorsements as above. They are free for the asking.

If you suffer from periodical headache, backache, dizziness, pain or dragging down sensation low down in the abdomen, weak back, have disagreeable and weakening, catarrhal, pelvic drain, or are in distress from being long on your feet, then you may be sure of benefit from taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

AN Ancient Telephone.

In 1783 M. Linquet de la Bastille issued a prospectus, published in the "Correspondence Secrete," London, 1788 (volume 14, page 302), of "a singular machine or experience of the propagation of sound and the voice through tubes prolonged to a great distance." If it succeeded, he announced, people would be able to maintain with their sweethearts and friends at a distance of some hundreds of leagues a conversation which would "become somewhat public on the way, but by suppressing the names no one would be in the secret of the interlocutors." But it is not recorded that the scheme was put into practice. In a paper published in L'Illustration for 1851 by M. Charles Boursien he says: "Let us imagine that a person speaks near to a mobile plate sufficiently flexible not to lose any of the vibrations produced by his voice and that this plate intercepts and establishes accordingly communication with a battery. Then are right have at a distance another plate which would give at the same time the same vibrations. An electric battery, two vibrating plates and a wire would be sufficient." In apportioning the honors of telephone discovery M. Boursien at least would seem entitled to a share.

How to Grow Miniature Oaks.
Secure a good ripe acorn and suspend it by a piece of cord within half an inch or so of water contained in a glass. There let it stay, for if permitted to remain without disturbance for a few months it will burst, send a root into the water and shoot upward a straight, tapering stem covered with beautiful little green leaves. In this manner a young oak tree can be cultivated and become an interesting object to all that behold it. As soon as the plant has made its appearance it will be found beneficial to change the water frequently.

Excellent Premiums.

"What would you think of a 99 per cent premium?" said an insurance agent. "A premium of $99,000 on a $100,000 policy. Hardly worth taking out, eh?" Such a policy was once taken out, though, on a ship thought to be lost. It is a common thing on oceanic ships to take out policies at 80 or 85 or 90 per cent. On the Bulgaria and the Craft in 1899 policies at 90 per cent were taken out, and on the Adelaide Mary, even after two of her lifeboats had been packed up, a policy of 92 per cent was secured.

Light of the Stars.
Various attempts have been made to estimate the light of stars. In the northern hemisphere Argelander has registered 321,660 stars down to the five and one-half magnitude, with the aid of the last photographic data. Agnes M. Clark's "System of the Stars" gives the sum of the light of these northern stars as equivalent to 1,410 ft. of full moonlight, and the total light of all stars similarly enumerated in both hemispheres to the number of about 600,000 is roughly placed at 1,150 of the lunar brightness. The scattered light of still fainter celestial bodies is difficult to evaluate. By a photographic method Sir William Abney in 1896 rated the total starlight of both hemispheres as 1,600 of full moonlight, and Professor Newcomb in 1901 from visual observations of diffused sky radiance fixed the light power of all stars at just 728 times that of Capella, or 1.59 of the light of the full moon. It is not certain, however, that the sky would be totally dark if all stars were plotted out. Certain processes make the upper atmosphere strongly luminous at times, and one never can be sure that this light is absent.

Hunt For a Hangman.
The British army was once in difficulties through the lack of a hangman. Murder was committed by a soldier in the Crimea, but nobody could be found to carry out the sentence of the court martial. It was announced that £20 and a free discharge would be granted to the man undertaking the task. At last a man did volunteer. He was a newcomer to the army. On the night prior to the date fixed for the execution they looked up the hangman in a stable to keep him safe. In the morning the party at the gallows waited, but there was no hangman. He had gone mad during the night or else he was now simulating madness. The officer in command turned to one of his captains with, "Captain, you will have the goodness to hang the prisoner!" The captain changed countenance, but he pulled himself together and appealed to the sergeants with, "Which of you will hang this man?" And to spare his captain one of the men volunteered. He afterward had the satisfaction of flogging the man who had volunteered and failed.

The Way to Work.
If work has to be done the only way to escape will be to launch oneself upon the task, realizing that if it is difficult it is not likely to grow easier and that some sort of a beginning must be made. "Keep the faculty of effort alive in you by a little gratuitous exercise every day," writes a canny psychologist in his chapter on "Habit." This gratuitous exercise it is that trains the will to rule life and destiny; it is the one great secret of success. Postponing of disagreeable duties means laxness invading the will, a certain slackening of all the mental nature, an invasion of a paralytic tendency. If the will failed to obey at a given moment yesterday it is vastly less likely to obey today, whereas a daily habit of forceful inhibiting or commanding makes for that most desirable of all endowments, "a completely fashioned will." — Harper's Weekly.

Persistent.
A middle aged man stopped at the subpostoffice in the north end and asked if there was anything for the Murphys.

"No, there is not," said the man at the window.
"Anything for Jane Murphy?"
"No."
"Anything for Anne Murphy?"
"No."
"Anything for Bob Murphy?"
"No."
"Anything for Terry?"
"No, nor for Pat nor for Dennis nor Pete nor Matt nor Edward Murphy. There is nothing for any Murphy, dead, living or unborn, native or foreign, civilized or savage, male or female, black or white, franchised or disfranchised. No, there is positively nothing for any of the Murphys, either individually, collectively, severally, now and forever, one and inseparable."

The little man on the outside of the window looked amazed and then in a persuasive voice said, "Please look and see if there is anything for P. J. Murphy." — Columbus Dispatch.

Almost a Miracle.
A good hearted carter who firmly believed that God was continually working miracles to enable him to help the needy and who seldom had a coin in his pocket, though he was never devoid of the fire of charity in his heart, was accosted one day by a beggar woman. He pleaded utter lack of money and sadly turned aside, but on the mendicant beseeching him to search his pockets he hesitantly put his hand in and, to his amazement and joy, found a five shilling piece there.

"Another of God's miracles," he exclaimed, and then, addressing the woman: "This coin belongs to you of right. Take it and go in peace." Having told the story a few hours later to his worldly minded clerk and suggested that they should both go down on their knees and render thanks to God, a strange unpleasant light suddenly broke on the mind of the shrewd partner, who exclaimed in accents not suggestive of thanksgiving: "Good Lord, are those my breeches that you're on now?" — Contemporary Review.

"Ducks and Drakes."
The origin of the common saying "Making ducks and drakes with one's money" is attributed to a game described in the words of an old writer as "a kind of sport or play with an oyster shell or stone thrown into water and making circles 'ye'er it shuke'." If the stone emerges once, it is a duck; if it emerges more than once, the game proceeds according to the following rhyme:

1. A duck and a drake;
2. A halfpenny cake;
3. And a penny to pay the old baker;
4. A hop on a scotch
Is another notch;
5. Sillicrum, slatherum! Take her!

The game is evidently the same as that played even today by every boy who has access to a pond or a quiet river when he tries to make a smooth stone skip along the surface of the water. Its connection with the popular phrase is, of course, only a metaphorical one to indicate heedlessness in the use of money.

"To the Bitter End."
One of the most interesting phases of the study of language is the peculiar manner in which words and phrases originating in mistakes finally grow into the common speech of the people. An instance of this is the expression "to the bitter end," which is commonly used to denote the final extremity of a crisis. Although perfectly proper today, it is in reality a mistake. The correct phrase is "to the better end," and arose from the fact that when a vessel has paid out all her cable in a storm it has run out to the end which has been little used and therefore to the better end. Daniel Defoe uses the proper phrase in "Robinson Crusoe" in his description of the storm at Yarmouth when he says, "We roie with two anchors ahead and the cables veered out to the better end."

Romance of the Cigar.
A bride of a year ago gave her husband a box of long, lean and sickly looking cigars for a birthday present. The man smelled them, looked at the label and then, with tears in his eyes, said: "I cannot bear to smoke your present. I will keep them always as a token of your love." His wife was so touched that she went down town and ordered three boxes of the same brand and had them charged to her husband. When she gave them to him she said: "Here, dear; these are not a present. Smoke them and enjoy them." — Topeka State Journal.

Homeric Symbol.
You know the fine picture in Homer of the dead leaves which fall to make place for the young buds. It is as true of men as of trees; we have our time and pass away. Behind our vanished youth germinates the youth of others. Our children's destiny ought not to be dulled by what there has been in ours. — Revue des Deux Mondes.

A Lever.
"Is that baby strong?"
"Well, I should say so! He raised the whole family out of bed at 5 o'clock this morning, and scientists say that that's the hour when everybody's strength is at its lowest point." — London Answers.

Giving It Away.
The Young Man—Dicky, you think a good deal of your sister, don't you?
Dicky (entertaining him)—You bet! So does ma and pa. She's been in the family mighty near forty years.—Chicago Tribune.

An obstinate fruit stain can generally be removed by holding the spot over the fumes of sulphur.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address:

FRENCH THOMPSON.

Enterprising Paris Boy.

The following is taken from a recent copy of a Pittsburg daily paper and is a very complimentary reference to a successful Paris boy:

"W. A. Parker, formerly of Paris, Ky., and Thomas C. Fogarty, for years one of the best known young men in the clothing trade here, have opened up a new clothing house at 210 Sixth street, under the firm name of Parker-Fogarty company. It will be devoted exclusively to the highest class of men's clothing, and promises to fill a want long felt in Pittsburg."

The Parker-Fogarty company propose that the fit of every customer who leaves their store shall constitute an advertisement for them. No garment will be allowed to be taken away unless it is a perfect fit, whether it is dress suit or for business wear. No tag or other marking on any garment from their store advertises the fact that it is custom made, and the quality and the cut are as perfect and as up-to-date as can be turned out of any tailoring establishment in the city. Indeed, the latest fashions in men's clothing as worn in New York and London will be a feature of the Parker-Fogarty store. In short, it is a store where a customer, tall or short, stout or slim, can be fitted as perfectly as in the best tailor shop, in the latest styles and in the best goods and at prices better than the tailoring establishments can give. If the garments with the fit desired is not found hanging in their cases (no goods are left out on the counters or in piles) expert tailors are instant readiness to alter and make the fit perfect. The finish of all their goods is all that the most fastidious buyer could ask, and every garment sold is guaranteed in quality, fit and finish before it is allowed to go out.

"A feature of the store is that the customer can see the goods hanging in glass-covered cases, each suit or garment by itself, and so knows just what he is getting. Their opening display, showing latest models and fabrics for the spring of 1907, in suits, topcoats, trousers and waistcoats is something to gladden the eyes of good dressers. Their full dress and Tuxedo suits at $25 to $50, and their silk-lined, full dress overcoats at $35, will warm the heart of the man who wants to be well dressed, but must be careful of his expenditures. Altogether, the Parker-Fogarty company store, the only exclusive men's clothing house in Pittsburg, is one calculated to attain the popular approval."

Card To Tobacco Growers.

County Chairman John A. LaRue has issued the following card to the tobacco growers of this county:

Your attention is called to an invitation from the people of Lexington to meeting and barbecue to be given in honor of the tobacco growing fraternity at Lexington Thursday, April 25. It will be an occasion not only of interest to every man engaged in the tobacco business, but of the most serious importance in connection with the movement for higher prices and better conditions in which we are all now participating.

It will be a day for reports from every county in the tobacco growing district. The crop of 1906 is not yet sold, largely because the crop to be grown in 1907 is not yet signed. We believe, that when the 1907 crop has been properly signed the Trust will speedily take from our hands the tobacco now in the warehouses. Into her words, the Trust has been living, and is still living, on the tobacco it has been able to buy from parties who were unwilling to sign the 1906 crop. We must have the crop of 1907 signed at once.

Next Saturday, April 20, at 10 o'clock a. m., the Bourbon County Board of Control will meet at Paris. If you have not signed your tobacco for the coming year do not wait for the precinct chairman to call upon you but go at once to him and sign next year's crop in order that he may make his report at next Saturday's meeting. If you prefer, sign the contract and mail it to the undersigned chairman.

The work must be done within the coming week. If you are with us the time has come to show your faith. Every man who is interested in this movement for fair prices and a square deal will have signed his 1907 crop and mail it to the undersigned chairman, at 10 o'clock a. m.

JOHN A. LARUE, Chairman.

The Black Hawk Corn Planter

Will drop the required number of grains in a hill, doing away entirely with the labor of thinning.

Has valve in shoe, arranged so that the seed will drop at the proper place, whether the team be walking fast or slow. This means straight corn.

Has plates that are easily changed without removing seed from the seed boxes.

Has a perfectly flexible frame that insures planting at even depth on rough land.

Can be changed to hand drop, drill or check row in less than a minute's time.

Has wire reel that takes up wire while planting last two rows.

These and many other valuable features are found only on the Black Hawk Planter. For sale by
